

I feel that being able to use/transfer your cell phone number from one carrier to another is extremely important. With all of the competition out there, and people switching plans annually, it is extremely inconvenient to be forced to get a new cell phone number. I do not see any technical reason why this cannot be done. I feel that the carriers are opposed to this purely from a cost point of view. I would gladly pay a reasonable FCC portability charge to keep my current cell phone number.
